STATEWIDE COMMON ASSESSMENT PROJECT

The State Chancellor's office is in the process of creating a Common Assessment System to streamline and improve assessment in English, ESL, and mathematics courses. Use of the new system will be required for districts to qualify to receive Student Success Funding (Matriculation funding).

As part of the development of the new system, the state is considering multiple measures. 12 community colleges statewide will participate in a pilot study to examine the integration of multiple measures into the Common Assessment System. The pilot project is based upon the Long Beach Promise Pathways alternative assessment that received significant attention for its cutting edge approach last year.

The State Chancellor's office plans to have twelve colleges pilot the Common Assessment System by fall 2015, with full implementation expected in early 2016. Stay tuned for more information.
